Strange Russian Religious Sect Now In Canada Would Kill Babes

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Feb. 21.—Peter Veregin, leader of that strange Russian religious sect known as the Doukhobors, which has 9000 settlers in Canada, proposes that the whole tribe drown its children under ten years of age together with the aged and infirm, as a protest against exorbitant taxes.

Once rid of those who cannot travel, Veregin wants his followers to abandon their farms and wander over the country, preaching the coming of Christ and living as a "vagrant working class," identified with the proletariat.

Word of this outcome of the long conflict between the Russian non-conformists and the Canadian Government, chiefly over taxes, school laws and military service, was conveyed by M. Kottinoff, manager of the sect in British Columbia.

Kottinoff said there had been a mass meeting of the British Columbia settlers and they had endorsed the proposals that they liquidate all their properties, Committees, he wrote, would dissipate lands, houses and

"Roma" Big American Airship Plunges 34 To Flaming Death Crashes To Earth On Its Trial

With Vertical Control Out Of Commission, She
Glides Down 300 Feet, Landing Across High
Power Electric Lines—Chemicals And Gasses
Explode, Setting Fire To Everything.

ONLY 3 MEN ESCAPE WITHOUT INJURY

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 21.—Thirty-four men were killed, 8 injured seriously, and 3 uninjured or only slightly bruised when the giant army airship "Roma" with her crew and a number of civilian totaling 45 in all aboard plunged today a flaming mass to the ground at the Hampton Roads Naval Base.

The accident presumably was caused by a broken rudder and as the dirigible plunged to earth, it capsize across high tension electric lines, blazing into a furnace of hydrogen gas.

Long after dark tonight, many hours after her fall, the ship was still a mass of flames from end to end. The fire and the million cubic feet of gas which had distended the great bag for the flight made all attempts at rescue work futile.

Barely a dozen of those aboard were picked up alive and one of these died on the way to the hospital. All of those who survived the fire, escaped by jumping. The others in the hull of the bag were burned to death.

The flames were finally brought into submission by 3 departments who fought them with chemicals. There was left but little more than the bare frame work. and the 6 liberty motors. Within the wreckage lay the bodies, charred beyond recognition but before the day had passed 33 had been removed, accounting for the last of those who were known to have taken flight.

Accounts of survivors and of eye-witnesses appeared to agree that the huge structure of the stern rudder, itself as large as a bombing plane had slipped to one side as it dove alone a thousand feet above the army base.

It was making a trial flight, with a new battery of Liberty motors. They were installed to replace Italian engines, but which had not proved satisfactory. Installation was completed at Langley field two weeks ago.

Trouble developed in the operating quarters of the ship. The nose of the bag dipped. On the ship came unchecked in her glide, her commander could not force her the 300 feet which would have placed her in the bay with comparative safety.

Below the double wires of the electric line stretched. It carried a 2500 volt current. The "Roma's" nose shot into the wires, breaking them, and rolled over, and the next moment came the noise of the explosion, and the flames broke out along her hull space. There was a rush of men to the rescue from the army post and the naval base.

Just as the "Roma" neared the

experts today put on an investigation into the cause of the disaster to the Roma. Stark flame seared, the twisted skeleton of what had once been the queen of the skies rested in the mud flats off Norfolk, its charred remains containing many of the secrets which the experts will seek in their investigations. One official of the Air Service expressed an opinion that none will ever know what caused her to collapse. Major General Patrick, Chairman of the Army Air Service was on the ground today with the court of inquiry. While the court will require several days to complete its investigations the indications are that the crew will be exonerated and the cause of the crash reported as "unknown." Most of the men were killed by the explosion and the flames which followed and few were killed by the fall. Most of the bodies were identified by trinkets, so thoroughly did the flames do their work of destruction.

wires 2 men were seen to leap from her. As the stricken monster writhed in her agonies, 10 more leaped from her sides.

So swift was the flare of the gas flame, that the rescuers were driven back. They watched helplessly. It was a wall of flame a city block long as thousands of gallons of chemical burned. It was impossible to reach the comrades in the flames.

The ship left no passenger list behind her when she set out. She is known to have carried many officers and passengers. As she rose from the field her commander learned out to signal that he had 40 passengers. It is believed that he did not include one passenger.

Washington, Feb. 21.—The accident to the Roma occurred when the vertical control was carried away, Capt. Boyle of the naval air station at Hampton Roads said in a telephone conversation late today with Rear Admiral Moffet at the navy department.

Washington, Feb. 21.—The disaster at Hampton Roads army base to the airship "Roma" largest craft of her type in the world, cast gloom over Navy and army departments. Only unofficial reports, however, were received and officials have no on receipt of the news Major General Patrick, chief of the air service left by airplane for the scene of the disaster.

MINERS CAN EXPECT NO AID FROM RAIL WORKERS IS BELIEF

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 22.—Coal miners must fight their own battles with the operators in the event of a strike April 1st and can look for no aid from the rail workers, it was indicated here today. GET LAFOLLETTE IS CRY OF REGULARS IN WISCONSIN

But Thus Far Nobody Is Available As Opponent
Who Is Strong Enough
To Put Up Big Battle.

FACE BIG FIGHT

By Lawrence Martin

Washington, Feb. 22.—"Fighting Bob" LaFollette's political career has been marked from the beginning by attacks upon him. Time and again the word has gone forth that LaFollette was "through" that his enemies at last had him down and almost out, and that he would retire to private life.

But LaFollette has emerged time and again from the heap with his bushy gray pompadour hardly ruffled, while his enemies have retired in bad order to patch up their hurts and form for a new assault.

This year the greatest assault upon LaFollette which he has yet been called on to face is being prepared. The whole power and influence of the Harding administration are behind it. Its slogan and battle-cry is covered by two words—"Beat LaFollette." Its generalissimo in the field is Senator Irvine Lenroot, who with LaFollette represents Wisconsin in the Senate.

LaFollette will seek renomination this summer in the Republican senatorial primary. Thus far no one with sufficient hardihood to oppose him has been found. But under direction of the Lenroot forces, a committee of forty-four "sane progressives" has been selected to find someone in the state who can successfully keep the Republican nomination from LaFollette. The fight against him is based on his radical leanings and on his utter disregard of his party. The whole idea is to drive LaFollette out of public life, because he has refused to be a cog in the Republican machine.

Insurgency like his, when exercised in so high a place as the United States Senate, is dangerous, Republican leaders feel. They are spreading in Wisconsin the doctrine that LaFollette gives the state a bad name. "hat people think the whole state is composed of 'reds' and bolsheviks."

If LaFollette would work with his "enemies in the Republican lineup" in the Senate things would not be so bad. But the party feels he is a liability; he is called a Republican and he has a vote, but he uses it oftener against his party than for it. The Republicans in the Senate do not need LaFollette's vote right now, but they do not forget the time when their control of the Senate hung on the slender threat of one vote. Furthermore, LaFollette's example is felt to have a demoralizing effect stirring to unseemly independence of party rule certain other senators. If LaFollette can be disciplined and made an example, it will be easier to control other insurgents, the G. O. P. chiefs feel.

With full appreciation of LaFollette's power in Wisconsin, administration leaders set out months ago to "nibble away" his support. They ignored him [by] dispensing federal patronage—the "pie" that makes the political game worth while. Even minor postoffices were withheld from LaFollette men, and given to Lenroot partisans. Lenroot was given all the help possible in building up a machine that would be able to take LaFollette's measure in this year's campaign.

Mrs. W. O. Newman nee Edna Johnson left today for her home in Harrisburg after visiting her mother Mrs. Geo. Johnson on Second Street.

Fryberger Denies Complicity In The Karthous Bank Robbery Is Severely Grilled By Attorney

Kincaide, Now Serving Sentence For Actual Robbery, Corroborates Story Shope Told On Stand Yesterday Implicating Fryberger And Test In Frame-Up Of The Crime.

TEST ON WITNESS STAND ALL MORNING

Harry Kincaide, convicted accomplice of Raymond Shope in the Karthaus bank robbery, followed Shope on the witness stand yesterday just before the noon recess in the trial of William S. Fryberger. Kincaide corroborated every phase of the Shope story and linked Fryberger up in the conspiracy to rob the bank declaring that he was introduced to Shope by Fryberger, went into the deal at his suggestion and gave a part of the proceeds to Fryberger when he called at Kincaide's home a few minutes after he returned from Karthaus with the spoils of the robbery.

Kincaide passed through a searching cross examination at the hands of Attorney Liveright for the defense with flying colors, never deviating from the story first told. During the cross examination, Kincaide told how Fryberger, Shope and Test came to his home, as told by Shope and of Fryberger calling him out and introducing him to Shope, on the Monday before the robbery and then of the several meetings of the four men that and the following day. He told of hunting Fryberger to make the trip to Karthaus Wednesday morning and then detailed the story of the robbery and return to the Shope home where the loot was divided.

He said they drank a quart of whiskey during that morning and when they had finished dividing the money at Shope's home, Morgan Shope, Ray's brother, came to the house and he drove Kincaide to his home in the Shope car. He had his money in a vest pocket, which he took up to his bedroom at his home. Shortly after arriving at his home Fryberger came to the house. The stolen money was lying on the bed and Fryberger counted the bills, saying there was $1700 in that pile. He then gave Fryberger some money $50 in bills he thought and denied that he had told Fryberger he had "knocked off a load of booze and had told 195 cases, as was alleged by the attorney's question, that booze was not mentioned at all. He said Fryberger left about 5 o'clock and returned to the house after supper, and accompanied him to Addleman's store where they purchased $170 worth of clothing, consisting of a suit and overcoat for each, he giving Fryberger the money to pay the bill. He ordered his clothes delivered to the Coal Exchange Hotel and they left the store. Fryberger then left him and he was arrested later in the evening.

In answer to Mr. Liveright's questions Kincaide admitted he told the State Police and Sheriff Gorman following his arrest that Fryberger had nothing to do with the robbery, but said he did so to protect the rest of the gang, but did tell all about the robbery when he reached Clearfield under arrest at 10 o'clock Thursday night, the day after the affair.

He told of buying some jewelry at McCausland's store in company with a man named Oscar Stitz, whom he met at the Coal Exchange and also made two trips to Osceola that evening with Stitz. He then said the combination to rob the bank consisted of Test, Shope, Fryberger and Kincaide and that he became a party to it at the suggestion or request of Fryberger.

Deputy Sheriff Gilliland was then called to establish the location of the Karthaus bank as in Clearfield county, the records of the Court showing the indictment and pleas of guilty of Shope and Kincaide and their sentence to the penitentiary to from 7 to 12 years were offered in evidence and then District Attorney Arnold announced that the prosecution had closed its case.

Fryberger Testimony

A short recess was taken, after which Mr. Liveright opened the defense to the jury and called the defendant William S. Fryberger to the stand as the first witness for the defense. He said he was 36 years old and married. Said he knew Test and Kincaide all his life, but met

PITTSBURGH MINE OWNERS REFUSE TO MEET MINE WORKERS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 21.—The Pittsburgh Coal Producers Association tonight rejected the invitation of John L. Lewis, President of the U. M. W. of A. for a joint conference to discuss a new wage agreement. The reply follows:

"Answering your message of this date, we will not again enter into any four state agreement. It is not necessary to meet to fix a date for such a conference. When the men of Pittsburgh are willing to meet with us to discuss wage scales which meets present conditions, we will meet with them."

Members of the Association employ 45,000 bituminous miners in the Western Pennsylvania district.

CRASH OF "ROMA" THOT DEATH BLOW TO ALL DIRIGIBLES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 22.—A strong demand that the appropriation for Army and Navy dirigibles be stopped at once arose in Congress today as the result of the Roma disaster at Norfolk yesterday which took a toll of thirty-four lives.

Because of the destruction of the big American ship yesterday, the explosion of the ZR2 over Hull, England, last August, with the loss of sixty-two lives, and the loss of several smaller craft in recent years, Congressional leaders believe it unwise to risk further lives on the dirigible. Doubt was expressed as to whether the dirigible will ever be of much use in warfare.

LEGION BAND WILL BE ON HAND FOR FISHER MEETING

Band And Big Reception
Committee Will Meet
Special From DuBois
And Curwensville.

PLANS COMPLETED

The temporary organization promoting the candidacy of John S. Fisher for the Governorship of Pennsylvania announces this morning that all arrangements are complete for the meeting to be held at the Driggs Theatre tomorrow afternoon and that reports coming in from Fisher admirers continue to indicate that a political mass meeting rivaling those of "ye olden time" is bound to be the result.

The American Legion Band, that crack musical organization which is so necessary a part of everything Clearfield Countians do, has been engaged for the afternoon. This organization together with the reception committee which has been appointed will meet the special from DuBois, which will also carry Curwensville people and others along the B. & P. and escort them to the theatre where the band will assist in making the eagle scream.

In yesterday's report of the activities of the committee three names were inadvertently missed in listing the speakers. In addition to those listed yesterday, these additional ones were on the list: Mr. H. B. Powell, Mrs. J. P. O'Laughlin and Hon. G. M. Alcorn of DuBois.

There is no doubt that the theatre will be crowded and the committee urges all citizens to be on hand early in order to be sure of a seat.

The Fisher candidacy continues to grow in public approval. Chester County is very active in his behalf, and this breaking in the eastern part of the state is very significant.

Cameron County Endorses

Emporium, Pa., Feb. 20, 1922. At a mass meeting held this evening at the offices of the Niles Lamp Co., which was attended by most of the leading and influential men of Cameron County, it was unanimously decided to support Hon. John S. Fisher for Governor. Mr. Chas. L. Butler, an intimate friend for the past thirty years spoke in glowing terms of Mr. Fisher and his eminent qualifications for the office. He was followed by Prothonotary W. J. Leavitt, another friend of Mr. Fisher's, who paid a splendid tribute and made an eloquent appeal for the support of Mr. Fisher and made a motion that the assembly endorse his candidacy. The motion was duly seconded by Howard Dodge, another friend, after which the assembly voted unanimously to favor the nomination and election of Hon. John S. Fisher for Governor. Much enthusiasm and good will prevailed and it is generally conceded that Cameron County will be among the banner counties when it comes to rolling up majorities for the election of our next Governor, Hon. John S. Fisher.

Congressmen Favor Heavy Cut In Commissioned Army Officers

A race is on between Congress and the War Department to reduce the number of officers in the army. Congress is bent on drastic cuts in the commissioned as well as the enlisted personnel of the military establishment. Secretary Weeks and General Pershing have sensed the danger to the service and are striving to have Congress let them do the plucking.

The view at the Capitol is the War Department delayed too long. Army officers have been far too numerous in Washington. Congressmen have taken notice of them. The uniform has been prominent on the streets during "office" hours, at theatres and in hotel cafes. Mr. Weeks himself has said officially there should be a material reduction in the numbers on staff duty here. The White House was obliged to impose limitations on the number of invitations to the Army-Navy reception this week.

Before the war army and navy officers stationed in the capitol did not wear their uniforms. Their presence was less noticeable to Congress.

The number in both services here at present has become objectionable to members who desire to make a brave show of economy to regain public confidence which they sacrificed by their articles over the soldier bonus bill.

The current sentiment on Capitol Hill is for a reduction of the regular army to 100,000 enlisted men and approximately 7500 officers.

General Pershing has recommended a cut in the commissioned strength to 12,000, but Senate leaders are unable to see how Congress is voting to cut the enlisted force from 150,000 to 100,000 men would agree to any such high percentage of officer strength.

An officer for every eight men or even a one to ten ratio is regarded as having slim chance in the existing state of the congressional mind.

Whatever may be the disposition of the House there is a feeling in the Senate that the plucking of army officers should be left almost Bat's Physical Limitation.

A bat cannot rise from a perfectly level surface. These winged mammals are remarkably nimble in their flight when once on the wing and can fly for many hours at a time without rest, but if placed on a floor or flat ground they are utterly unable to use their wings. The only thing a bat can do in such a situation is to shuffle helplessly and doubtless painfully along until it reaches some trifling elevation from which it can throw itself into the air. Then at once it is off like a flash.

A Paris newspaper inquired of its readers what attributes a Frenchman regards as most desirable in his wife. The 20,000 replies indicated that health was regarded as the most desirable quality. Keep Coal Dry.

If coal is kept in a dry, airy place it will burn much better than if placed in a close, poorly ventilated cellar. Coal that is excluded from the air soon gets rid of its gas and the absence of this renders it more wasteful when burned.

Mysteries of the Infinite.
What do the stars above us mean? What's around them? What is their purpose in creation? Our "star," which we call the sun, we fondly believe is for the purpose of giving our little grain we call the earth, warmth and light, so that we may live and move and have our being. As we strut about and enjoy our petty achievements we do not often contemplate the starry vault above us. Perhaps it is just as well so for when we search out the knowledge of the heavens how we shrink! How we shrink!—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

LEITZINGER BROTHERS

ODDS AND ENDS AND THINGS

By "Skinney"

That Lock Haven woman who recently gave birth to the second pair of twins within a year will have to take second place behind the Kentucky mother. Quadruplets have been born to Mrs. William Potest of Edmonson County, it became known today. The Potests were married five years ago and now have twelve children. The quadruplets are in excellent health.

The fellow who advocates paying the world war soldiers adjusted compensation out of the money received from the allied nations in payment of the many billions loaned during the war are no doubt in favor of paying the bonus in "pork." Here is what the French have to say regarding the five or six billions they owe us:

There is no debt to America; there cannot be any question of such a debt.

"This money which is claimed from us was advanced in order that the French should hold the west front until the arrival of the English and that the French and English might hold it four years until the arrival of the Americans. And it is these last comers, contriving to combine honor with profit who now transform into debts their advances for a common cause.

"But who will repay us those advances of blood we made, without which there would have been no Washington Conference, for it would not have been the German fleet which would have been at the bottom of the sea.

We do not ask remission of the debt. We maintain there is not and there can be no question of debt."

Mayor Dan Hart of Wilkesbarre, Pa., a song writer of note and "hell-raiser" by choice. The other day he had a resolution introduced in city councils declaring for wine and beer. It passed by a large majority. The ministers of the town and the W. C. T. U. jumped all over Mayor Dan and the question was debated several times with the Mayor taking the "wet" end. The outcome of the controversy was a referendum vote of the townspeople which was concluded Saturday last. Eleven thousand votes were cast by citizens of Wilkesbarre and surrounding community and of this number 9535 favored beer and wine, while but 1743 voted "dry."

The average Pennsylvanian simply can't resist the temptation incident to close proximity to a pretty woman and will "lay on hands" on occasions. The latest Keystone to run true to form—that we have heard of—is Leighton Taylor, Secretary to the late Senator Penrose. Mrs. Alma C. Smythe, a comely blond of 30 years, entered suit at Washington on Monday last in which she asks damages of $100,000 for Taylor's cave man tactics. Here is what she says in her complaint: Last May she went to the Finance Committee room to see Senator Penrose. There Mr. Taylor, "without any justifiable reasonable or probable cause whatever, rudely, unlawfully and with much force and violence, grabbed hold of, hugged and kissed your plaintiff without her consent and over her resistance," according to the allegations in the complaint.

Mr. Taylor indignantly denies the charge, explaining: "She kept bothering us for a long time, and finally I put her out of the office, after the Senator had declined to receive her."

The allies won the war and now our State Department has to intervene strenuously to prevent our late comrade Johnny Bull from pushing the Standard Oil Company out of the oil fields of the Near East, where American food is saving a large part of the population from starving to death.

"Our New Minister" is some man. If you don't believe it come to St. Bonaventure Church at Grampian on the evening of the 24th and 25th and see death. The State Department is preparing to take a determined stand in support of the doctrine of equal opportunity for American nationals throughout the world, and more especially in the rich oil fields of the Near East.

Not only is the United States fighting for its rights under the mandate accorded to Great Britain, but also in Turkey, in Persia and in the Balkans, the United States proposes to insist that American citizens be accorded the same rights and privileges enjoyed by nationals of the Allied countries.

The present 3 per cent restrictive immigration law will remain operative until June 30, 1923, according to a 280 to 36 vote taken in the House of Representatives at Washington Monday. Representative Johnson of the Immigration Committee in speaking on the passage of the resolution said: "Never again will the people desire to return to the old custom of free immigration. Ellis island is more nearly a desert than it has been in twenty years. During the first five months of the operation of the present law, the net number of new immigrants was reduced to 44,104. The detention cases there today number 400, as compared with 2,000 daily in years past."

Thanks to the advance in Medical Science and skill the deaths of persons between the ages of 45 and 74 decreased 12 per cent during the ten year period ending with 1920, as compared with the ten years preceding. The decrease in the mortality of infants under one year of age, during the same period amounted to 26 per cent. The death rate for old people over 75 years also decreased 6 per cent during the ten years. The decrease in the age group of 45 to 74 is said to be due largely to much lower death rate from tuberculosis, acute nephritis and Bright's disease, organic diseases of the heart, accidents and typhoid fever. The increase in the death rate were from influenza and cancer largely.

In courts in New York City in one week three juries were severely reprimanded by judges for bringing in verdicts of "not guilty" when the evidence clearly supported the guilt of the accused. The unwillingness of jurors to convict in face of the evidence has often been noted and is not confined to one locality. The doubt about what a jury will do has become an adage, though in these latter days the preponderance of chance appears to be in favor of acquittal regardless of the character of the proof offered. It is especially difficult to secure a jury which will convict of murder in the first degree. A judge, in commenting on the reluctance of juries to render a verdict of guilt when the testimony demands it, says:

"Recent developments are due, I think, to something comparable with the spirit of lawlessness and revolt against authority and government that has manifested itself among criminals in crime outbreaks and is indicated among persons not criminals, but who are averse to supporting organized government by putting down lawlessness and law-breakers. It is a manifestation of the Bolshevik spirit, which, to a certain degree, seems to pervade the whole world. It is due in part to the varied complex conditions of present-day civilization. A lack of appreciation of ideals and standard of good citizenship. Apparently violations of law and the commission of crimes are not regarded today by many persons as seriously, as they were looked upon two or three years ago."

The jury system for hundreds of years has been considered the bulwark of our civilization. To be tried before one's peers has been considered a guarantee of justice to the accused and vindication of the law. If sympathy for the accused take precedence of regard for law we are far on our way toward anarchy. The judge remarks further that the present-day jury material is unsatisfactory. There are too many classes of citizens exempt, and he holds that there is no more reason for excusing classes from such service than for releasing them from allegiance to the government. While this is true, it happens that in most instances one or two may thwart the wishes of the others and prevent agreement if they cannot dictate it. A hung jury does little more in the interest of justice than one which turns loose a prisoner who is clearly guilty.

It is possible that the disregard of law on which the jurists comments is due in part to infiltration of an element absent in an earlier day, but which has come in with ideas of law a variance with those held by the people who settled the land and dominated the sentiment for generations. The situation is one that gives concern, the more so since there is no obvious remedy.—Pittsburgh Gazette-Times.

The Progress sees a healthy sign in the interest being taken in the selection of a candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. The very presence of such an interest is an assurance that the Republican party will not go wrong in the selection of a candidate. Only strong men can put their appeal before an enlightened public with any hope of success, and perhaps that is why there is very little being heard from the smaller fry who might otherwise make a try at the nomination this year. Today every contender for party approval is first forced to run the gauntlet of public opinion before the party adopts him as its standard bearer. Often it is said that "after all, the bosses will select the candidate." That they will, but not until some one of the many now seeking the job, demonstrates to the party leaders that they can stand up clean, and unassailed before the bar of public opinion. Now, of all times is the time for the citizens of this state to interest themselves in who shall fill all the offices. If you are one of those who shrink the responsibility of citizenship by saying you are not interested, set yourself right now by getting active for whoever, in your opinion, is the best man.

LEPROSY THOUGH RARE IN U.S. IS STILL NATIONAL PROBLEM

Washington, D. C., February 22.—"Leprosy," says Surgeon General Cumming, of the U. S. Public Health Service, "though comparatively rare in continental United States, is still a public health problem of much greater seriousness than seems to be popularly supposed. Its virulence waxes and wanes in accordance with laws that we do not understand; and our present comparative immunity does not lessen the necessity for being on guard."

"In the past we have not escaped. In 1786 leprosy beggars were so common in New Orleans that they had to be segregated in a leprosarium. In 1864 three per cent of the population of the Hawaiian Islands were lepers. In 1890 California had to establish a leprosarium, and Louisiana and finally Massachusetts followed suit."

"In 1902 the Public Health Service found 278 lepers in the United States. 145 of whom had been born in this country, and only 73 of whom were under any restraint. Today, according to the best estimate obtainable, there are from 500 to 1,500 lepers in this country, a number of whom are known to have acquired the disease in the Philippines. When we acquired the Philippines several thousand lepers had to be and still are segregated in a settlement at Culion. Foci of the disease exist in the United States on the Pacific Coast, in the Northwest, in the Gulf States, and along the Atlantic seaboard."

"It was not until 1839 that the U. S. Government took its first steps to prevent lepers from coming to this country; and the preventive laws are now sufficiently explicit. Nevertheless, the long period during which the disease incubates before declaring itself, makes it very difficult to shut out all potential lepers. To meet this difficulty the law provides that for three years after admission, any alien leper may be deported if the cause of the disease existed before he came to the United States. Within the United States lepers may not travel in interstate commerce except under permits prescribing special precautions to prevent the spread of the disease."

"Protection against the disease is rendered more difficult by the fact that leprosy is found in a very large portion of the habitable globe, ranging from Russia and Iceland and America, North and South, and that the ever-increasing ease of communication offers many facilities for its importation to the United States. Nine lepers were turned back at quarantine during the fiscal year 1920-21."

"In February, 1917, Congress provided for a national home for lepers to be administered by the Public Health Service; but so strongly did the various States object to the founding of such an asylum within their borders that it was not until four years later that the Service was able to carry out the provisions of the act by acquiring the State leper home in Louisiana. Part of this home has been remodeled; and work in the remaining necessary alterations and additions is proceeding."

"The gloomy outlook for lepers has recently been tinged with hope by the discovery of a mode of treatment involving the use of chaulmoogra oil, which for 200 years has been reputed to be of beneficial effect for leprosy. The oil itself is absorbed slowly and is apt to cause painful abscesses; but the hypodermic injection of its ethyl esters, devised by Dean, have supplied a way by which it may be used without undue suffering. Since 1912 a total of 183 patients have been paroled from the Kalahele Investigating Station of the Public Health Service in Hawaii (110 of them since July 9, 1919) as being apparently cured. Of those who have received the chaulmoogra oil derivatives only 12 (3 per cent) have returned for further treatment."

"While it is too early to say that a specific cure for the disease has been found, it is certain that the ethyl esters constitute a most valuable agent in the treatment of leprosy, especially for young persons and those in the early stages of the disease; in older person and advanced cases the indications are less promising. On the whole the results have been so favorable as to make the outlook distinctly hopeful. But only time can tell."

Come and see "Our New Minister." We have him in the basement of St. Vincent Church at Grampian and will show him on Friday and Saturday, the 24th and 25th.

CHAPTER IX.

The move to Harrington was made quickly and quietly, and lazy weeks followed, to Harriet weeks of almost cloudless content. Ward, early in August, after a serious talk with Harriet, joined some friends for a motor run of three thousand miles, and presently was sending them post cards from Monterey and Tahoe.

They had been in the new home only a few days when Harriet had reason to stop short in a busy morning of unpacking with one hand upon her heart, and a great satisfaction in her eyes. Nina, reading from a note from Royal Blondin, announced the sensational news that he had broken his ankle. He was with friends at Newport, and must remain there now for weeks, perhaps a month. Nina was glad to write to him, and to give him regard to Miss Field, and ask her not to forget him.

For several weeks they were safe. Nina did not know the family Royal had been visiting, there was a long interval before she could possibly see him again. He would write to the girl, of course, and Harriet knew with what absorbing emotion she would look for his letters. But Nina was young and wrote wretchedly, and anything might happen, thought Harriet, considering herself with a vague argument that was in itself youthful, too.

With September came changes. Blondin wrote that he was limping about with a stick, and wanted to limp down to them as soon as they would ask him. Ward was home again, as always irresponsible, a little older and in some vague way a little coarser. Harriet thought, but still a most interesting element in the quiet household. Madame Carter had brought with her, for several weeks' stay, a friend of Isabelle's, a pretty, dashing little girl, Mrs. Taber. The resolute brightness and sweetness with which Ida Taber attempted to amuse Richard gave Harriet some hint of the plan which was taking shape in the back of his mother's head. But she could only make Mrs. Taber comfortable, and fit her somehow into the youthful plans of the household.

Nina, Ward and Harriet fairly lived in the water, and Ward had unconsciously served his father's cause by bringing home with him a tongue-tied pleasant youth named Saunders Archer, whose presence in the house had helped to keep Nina pleased and amused. She had already imparted to Harriet the valuable information that Saunders had never known his mother, and had never had a sister, "and of course I have always been such an oddity in the family," said Nina, "that I got right at his confidence in that dreadful way of mine! He said he didn't know why he talked to me so frankly."

Harriet had seen to it that a variety of delightful plans awaited the young people at every turn. The retirement natural after the recent domestic catastrophe was too dangerous to risk now. And Harriet hoped, hoped, hoped, feverishly, incessantly, wearily, that the danger was past.

But Amy came down, mild and colorless as ever, yet still more poised, more socially adept than Nina, and with Amy innocently diverting Saunders' bashful attentions, Nina returned to thoughts of Royal. He was coming down with Madame Carter and Mrs. Taber in her car. Richard was bringing two men down for golf this week-end, and with Saunders and Amy, Royal and Madame Carter and Mrs. Taber, the house would be filled. She had plenty to do with the managing, the endless details that were brought her mercilessly, hour after hour, by maids and housekeeper. And yet under her quiet business and her happy hours with the young people there lurked incessantly a fretted sense of danger approaching.

Something of this was in her mind as she and Nina basked on the gently heaving float, in the sunshine. Nina talked incessantly of Blondin. Harriet fancied she saw an opening for a little talk she felt extremely timely.

"Mr. Blondin likes you, Nina, just because you aren't flirtatious and silly, like the other girls. But he isn't the sort of man to get very deeply interested in any woman, dear."

"No, I know he's not!" Nina said quickly, turning suddenly red, and looking attentively at the print of her wet hand on the dry, hot boards.

"And I would be sorry if he were," Harriet pursued, not too seriously. "For I want you to marry a man of your own age, when you do marry, and not a man who has had—well, other affairs, who has that confidential, flattering manner with all women! You will be rich, Nina."

"Why don't you say that Royal is after my money?" Nina burst out, with symptoms of tears. The ready name frightened Harriet afresh; she knew that they corresponded, that grass was not growing under Royal's feet. "The first man I ever really liked," Nina said, with a heaving breast, "the first man who ever understood me!"

"Nina," Harriet said, "you don't want to have to write your husband a check on your honeymoon?"

She felt it a cruel cut; but seventeen years of flattery and smoothness had armed Nina in impregnable complacency. She gave a sneering laugh, that trembled on the brink of tears, and tried to control a mouth that was shaking with anger. One look of utter scorn she did manage, then she shrugged not so much her shoulders as her whole body, and flung herself furiously into the water. Harriet called "Nina!" first impatiently, and then coaxingly. But the younger girl swam steadily to the shore, and Harriet saw her a minute later, shaking herself outside the shower, before she disappeared into the big bathroom. Harriet had entirely forgotten Ward.

with a characteristic yell, rose streaming like a seal under her very feet. Genuinely startled, she gratified him with a scream, and they both laughed like children as he flung himself dripping on the hot boards, and proceeded to bask luxuriously in the sun.

"It's the most gorgeous thing I ever saw, do you know that?" he asked, with one hand touching the river of sparkling gold that blazed and tumbled on her shoulders. "Listen, Harriet, do you remember the little talk we had some weeks ago?"

"Perfectly," she said, a little unwillingly.

"Well, how about it?" the boy said, after a pause.

"It wouldn't be fair to you, Ward," the girl said, slowly, after a pause. "I love you, but I don't love you the way your wife will!"

"I want you!" he said, sullenly. "I'm crazy about you! My God—"

"Ward, please don't touch me!" she said sharply, getting to her feet with a spring, as he put his arm about her. "Don't! I shall tell your father if you do!"

"You didn't talk that way at Crownlands last June," the man said, sulkily. "I don't see what has made such a difference now!"

"I think perhaps I'm different, Ward. The summer—" Harriet's voice died into silence. Her eyes were fixed upon the figure of a man who came down the little pier, and dove into the shining water. Two minutes later, with a great gasp of satisfaction, Richard Carter drew himself up beside them.

"Ha! That is something like! My Lord, the water is beautiful today! How about the buoy? Who swims with me to the buoy?"

"Come on, Harriet!" Ward said, pointing.

Harriet rose, and handled the shore of her hair into a blue rubber cap that made her look like a beautiful rosy French peasant. With no further speech she made a splendid dive, and the men followed her.

It was one of life's beautiful hours, she thought, as in a great splash of salt water she reached the buoy, and hung laughing and panting to its restful bulk. Ward had preceded her by a full minute. Richard was half a minute behind her. With much valdorous boasting from the men, they all rested there before the homeward swim. Harriet hardly spoke, her cup was full to the brim with a mysterious felicity born of the summer hour, the heaving waters, and the joyous mood of father and son. When Richard praised her swimming she flushed in the severe blue cap, and the blue eyes met his with the shy pleasure of a child. It was while she was hastily dressing, in the hot bathhouse a little later, that a sudden thought came to her, and flushed the lovely face again, and brought her to a sudden pause.

A tremendous thought, that made her breast rise suddenly, and her eyes fix themselves vaguely on space for a long, long minute. Her palms were damp, and she put them over her hot cheeks. But that—she whispered in the depths of her soul, that was nonsense!

Blondin had been waiting for Harriet at the church door. Coming out, she had indicated without a word that he might walk beside her. The service had been ill-attended, and the few women who drifted away from it did not walk in their direction, so they found themselves alone.

Harriet opened the conversation with a frank yet reluctant confession. "I'm so sorry, Roy! But it is only fair to you to say that I've changed."

Many people in a misguided effort to get rid of kidney bacacae, rely on plaster, liniments and other makeshifts. The right treatment is kidney treatment, and a remarkably recommended kidney medicine is Doan's Kidney Pills. Clearfield is no exception.

The proof is at your very door. The following is an experience typical of the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Clearfield: Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. Mary S. Passmore, 419 W. Front St., Clearfield, says: "I have suffered off and on for a good many years with kidney trouble. When an attack has come on, my back has been lame and sore and I have had dull, bearing down pains across my kidneys. My kidneys acted too frequently and I had nervous spells. I have used Doan's Kidney Pills at such times. They have always eased the pains through my back and head, regulated my kidneys and removed the nervous and dizzy spells."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Passmore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs. Buffalo, N. Y.

What a Man Seeks.

What a man seeks through his education is to get to know himself and the world, next, that for his knowledge it is before all things necessary that he acquaint himself with the best which has been thought and said in the world; finally, that of this best the classics of Greece and Rome form a very chief portion, and the portion most entirely satisfactory. With these conclusions lodged safe in one's mind, one is stanch on the side of humanities.—Matthew Arnold.

Record of Irish Regiments.

All but two Irish regiments bear on their colors the record "South Africa." One is the Fourth (Royal Irish) Dragoon Guards. The other lacks this and other battle-honors for a very sufficient reason; it came into existence in 1900 by command of Queen Victoria, to celebrate and to commemorate the honorable exploits of the other Irish regiments in the Boer war. This is the Irish Guards and it was added to the Brigade of Guards as a special distinction to all Irish troops.

You will have to do what you think fit about it, of course. But I can't pretend that I'm playing your game any longer."

"What game?" Blondin, falling into graceful step beside her, asked pleasantly.

"I mean any possible idea you might have of Nina!" Harriet said, bravely.

"Oh, Nina!" he shrugged his shoulders lightly. "Don't take me too seriously, Harriet," he said. "Why, whenever we are alone together, should you promptly begin to cross-question me about that little person?"

Harriet made a faint, impatient ejaculation.

"Well, anyway, you know where I stand!" she said.

"And you know where I do," he answered, after a pause. "I can see Carter has no particular enthusiasm for me—I suppose that's your work."

"You know where I stand," she could only repeat. They had reached the garden now, and were at the foot of the steps.

DR. SCHOLL'S "3" NECESSITIES HOME TREATMENT FOR THE FEET

5 Minutes A Day Keeps Foot Troubles Away

The feet are probably the most abused part of the body. They are squeezed into hot, tight shoes, which retard circulation and the proper blood supply. The feet should have the same amount of care that the hands and teeth require in order to maintain the body at its highest point of efficiency.

Dirt, dust and impurities work their way into the pores of the skin.

Dr. Scholl's "3" Necessities consist of Dr. Scholl's Foot Soap, Foot Balm and Foot Powder.

The daily use of Dr. Scholl's Home Treatment keeps the feet comfortable, healthy and sanitary. If your feet are normal, keep them so.

entirely to the judgment of Secretary Weeks and General Pershing. It is true, there is a fear the reductions might not take place with a rapidity satisfactory to Congress and, for that reason, some special direction may be incorporated into the army bill.

Senate leaders are inclined to proceed a little more cautiously relative to the naval personnel. The Senate will do nothing to undermine the efficiency of the "treaty navy." Senator Borah, of Idaho, and others who have led the fight for economy in army and navy appropriations, are unwilling to cut the personnel so as to weaken the American Navy beyond the 5-5-3 ratio.

It is probable some steps will be taken to reduce the number of naval officers assigned to staff duty in Washington. It is difficult to see how that may be done without a change of law governing the relation between sea and shore duty, yet there is a tendency on the Hill to provide that ships will not be tied up at naval stations for lack of officer personnel while there are blue uniforms galore at all the social functions of the national capital.

Longest Conclave in History.

There is no limit for the duration of a conclave of the sacred college at Rome. In the Middle Ages one conclave which met at Viterbo, about fifty miles from Rome, lasted over two years and a half. It is said that Louis XVI appeared in court wearing high wooden heels on his shoes. He was not a tall man, and adopted this expedient to make himself regally impressive. The term French heel was applied to high heels and finally to a certain type of high heel.
